UNION COLLEGE, OCTOBER 9, 1895.

No. 2.

Henry Whitehorne, LL, D.

Some days ago a professor of the college and one of the students were conjecturing upon the age of Dr. Whitehorne. The professor thought the doctor was eighty-two and the student avowed that Prof. Whitehorne was said to be eighty-two, when he entered college, which was three years ago. Both were wrong. Our veteran Greek professor is not so old as that, nor would we have him so. He is only eighty, having been born January the 6th, 1815, on the Island of Jamaica. That same year his father died, and his mother was left alone to bring up the family. Nearly six years elapsed before she could settle up the affairs of the estate. When in 1821, this was accomplished. Mrs. Whitehorne, being an English woman, took her children to England to be educated under the English school system, which was considered the most efficient and thorough in that day.

For nearly eight years Henry was kept under rod and ferrule at Shrewsbury. When fourteen years old, he left Shrewsbury and was put under the private instruction of a clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Bingham, of the church of England. Under the guidance of this thorough going man he toiled for four years, and in his 18th year he was fully prepared to enter Oxford. He studied at Oxford from 1833 to 1837, when he was graduated with honors. That he was a scholar of the first order any Greek student of Union can testify, and that he must have been an athlete, too, any terror-stricken freshman, who ever sat in Whitey's chair is ready to believe most conclusively. He was indeed one of the best athletes of his time. He belonged to various athletic clubs in college, and was at different times in his course, cockswain, boatswain, and oarsman on Oxford's Varsity Crew.

After graduating in 1837, he left England and came to New York city. From there he went to Canada and worked at clearing land for several years. But as the length and the severity of the winters prevented work in that season he left Canada in 1841 and came again to New York. Here he made use of his Oxford training, and became a teacher. In 1845 he married in that city and soon after went to Holly Springs, Mississippi, to take charge of a school in the diocese of Mississippi, which was intended to be turned into a theological seminary.

Here he stayed till 1852, when becoming dissatisfied with affairs, he went to Memphis and stayed there two years. At the end of this time he left Memphis to accept a call to the chair of Greek in the University of Mississippi, situated at Oxford, near the center of the state. It was here that he edited two of the plays of Euripides, and for this reason. Up to that time the southern States had been using northern textbooks in their colleges and schools. They then began to look to their own resources and desired to use books of their own editing and publication. With this end in view a league was formed among the southern colleges and universities and men of learning were requested to edit books for this league. It was at the request of some members of this league that Prof. Whitehorne edited the two plays of Euripides. But unfortunately these never went to press, for at that time the civil war broke out and everything except war came to a standstill.

Prof. Whitehorne did not favor the secessionists. When this became known he was quietly informed that it was for his own interests to quit the South immediately. So leaving household possessions, private papers, manuscripts, books, furniture, and nearly everything else of value, he succeeded after many difficulties and dangers, and after great expense, in getting north of the Potomac. This however he would not have accomplished but for a personal acquaintance with Jefferson Davis, at that time president of the Confederate States. Going straight to Richmond he interviewed the president, stated his case plainly, and through the latter's kindness he obtained a pass beyond the southern army. By means of this pass, he went to Washington, and thence came to New York, the home of his wife's relatives. This was about the beginning of November, 1861.

Being thrown abruptly out of home and position did not daunt him in the least. He soon turned his attention to journalism. During the early part of the war, he was war correspondent for a Russian newspaper, and did a great deal of work in a literary way.

In 1863, through the kindness of Mr. James Brown, a banker, he was chosen superintendent of the Classical Department of the Classical Institute at Schenectady.

This school was then, as now, divided into two departments, the Academic and College Preparatory. From the first, Dr. Whitehorne was under the College Preparatory division. In 1868, he was transferred to Union College, where he has taught ever since.

For the six years prior to 1894, Doctor Whitehorne was dean of Union College. Under his direction the grounds were wonderfully improved. The cares of this office were too much of a tax, however, and last year the doctor was obliged to retire from the deanship. Five years ago he was elected president of the Phi Beta Kappa of Union, which position he now holds.

Dr. Whitehorne is a modest and retiring man, and never likes his affairs made public. It is only in view of the fact that the College boys are so interested in his life that he has permitted his biography to be published at all. The stranger who meets the doctor and talks with him, may imagine from the gruff voice, that there is a rough heart within. Far from it. The boys will all tell you there is not a kinder man nor more faithful friend in even their closest circle of acquaintances.

It almost approaches reverence the degree to which Doctor Whitehorne has endeared himself to the students, and it is needless to say that the work he has accomplished has been of the most vital importance to the institution. No man can sit within his class-room and not feel the seriousness of his work, the earnestness of the doctor in solving the intricacies of construction, and especially the beauty of the classic Greek as he interprets it.

Cultured, refined, practical, thorough, and good almost to a fault, living a life of integrity, and passing through experiences that seem more like a romance than reality, we find him to-day the figure-head of the faculty of Union College.

Doctor Whitehorne may well be called the Grand Old Man of Union.

The Musical Association.

With the opening of the college year new interest is shown in its various college organizations, not the least among which is the Musical Association, comprising the Glee, Mandolin and Banjo Clubs. This association, although only in its second season, has had a very successful existence, and its prospects for the coming season is unusually good. The concerts given by the clubs the past season were of a high order, and Union students have every reason to be proud of their Musical Association.

The efforts of the association will be made at the close of the fall term, when, providing the efficiency of the clubs warrant it, an extended trip will be taken. Thus it remains, in order that the best efforts be made, the members of the association and the student to-day must give the management their hearty support. It is hoped that the talent in the in-coming class will more than make up the deficiency caused by the loss of members in the class of '95. The material in '99 promises well, and much is expected from the Medical Department of the University.

Under the able and efficient leadership of Mr. Joseph O'Neil, the success of the Mandolin and Banjo Clubs is assured, while Mr. Frank C. MacMahon, a prominent vocalist and instructor in voice culture, of Albany, will look after the interests of the Glee Club.

With the leaders of the clubs, the members of the association and the management doing all in their power to place a competent organization before the public, it only remains for the student body to add their aid, that Union's Musical Association may be of the first order.

RAH! RAH! RAH! RAH! RAH! RAH!
 RAH! RAH! RAH!
 YALE!!

The "Sons of Old Eli" Run Up a Score of 26
 Against Union's Kickers.

Union has started in a new foot-ball era. Last Saturday, for the first time in her history, she met the Yale team. It is also the first time she has ever met on the gridiron a team from any of the three larger colleges. The game with Yale could not have been more satisfactory, for there was nothing at all unpleasant in it. The Yale team are all gentlemen, and they used the Union men as such. And the wearers of the garnet returned the compliment. There was not the least kicking, and a game never went off more smoothly. Captain Thorne has surely won a place in the hearts of all true Union men. While Union was beaten she does not consider herself beaten badly, taking in account that this was her first game of the season.

THE CROWD.

The crowd at the game was one of the largest ever seen on the grounds of the Ridgefield Athletic Club. Yale has many followers in Albany, but Union has more. Besides, it was a foot-ball game, and no one can be up to date unless he goes to see a foot-ball game, and especially when Yale plays. From the time the gates were thrown open to the public until the teams lined up, there was a continuous string of people pouring in, and when the game finally began it is estimated that 5,000 were on the ground. The grand stand was filled, and several thousands crowded around the side lines on the opposite side of the field. The management of the crowd was good, and the field was kept clear of all except players, substitutes and officials.

There were many fashionable turnouts along the side lines, and nearly all had either the garnet of Union or the blue of Yale conspicuously waving from them. Union men were out in great numbers, and the people knew they were from Union, for they yelled long and loud, as they always do. The Yale yell, too, was heard frequently; for while not many of the undergraduates were present, there were lots of Yale men there—and Yale sisters, too.

The grand stand was a mass of humanity, and it was surely a pretty sight. Nearly all wore the colors of either Union or Yale, and the many beautiful and tasty toilettes blending with the handsome and cheerful faces of the wearers certainly formed an imposing spectacle. Every lover of sport in Albany was there. The old timer looked on with anxious gaze as the players rushed through the centre and thought how much different the game was when he played. Business and professional men forgot their dignity and yelled like mad when a good play was made. The young "would-be" looked with bulging eyes as a man would advance the ball and wondered if he would ever be able to play that way.

The fair sex was even more excited than the men. Mothers were there who had boys on the team, and at every rush their hearts would rise into their throats as they saw some one untangle the struggling mass of humanity. The sister, too, with anxious and excited gaze, watched her brother make a run with the ball or tackle a man, wondering at the time how he could ever do it uninjured. But it was the sweetheart that looked on with the closest attention, for she could not tell what might become of her lover as he dove through the crowd with the ball or stopped a centre play.

Then there was the girl who went to the game just because it was the fad. She was there in great abundance, and the white chalk lines meant no more to her than a base-ball diamond, for she didn't know what they were. She thought the man with the ball was doing all the work, no matter whether he ran backwards or forwards, and she could not understand why they were always giving such queer numbers.

THE TEAMS.

It was a few minutes before three when the Yale team trotted out on the field. They took a warming up by passing and falling on the ball while waiting for the Union kickers. The latter were slow in getting dressed, and it was nearly half-past three when they did come on the field, headed by Captain Beckwith. After passing the ball for a few minutes, both teams lined up and the game was on.

It was during the preliminary practice that one could best judge the size of the two teams. The comparison was very marked. Yale's team was almost twice as heavy as Union's, and some of the wearers of the garnet looked like pigmies when placed next to a Yale man. Yale's team was composed of tall, strongly built men, each one being a perfect model of an athlete. The Union team, while having a few well built men, was on a whole far inferior, both in weight and build. The tanned faces of the Yale men showed the results of long and thorough practice, as did also their playing.

Captain Thorne evidently intended to give his men some good practice, for he brought twenty along. However, only a few changes were made in the second half. The game showed many weak points in both teams, and Yale as well as Union will profit from the game. Behind the line Yale is practically invincible. Thorne, De Witt and Jerrems make a great trio, and they all use headwork to great advantage. They all are fast runners, play a snappy game and are hard tacklers. Fincke at quarter also plays an elegant game. He is sure on the pass and is very cool. But on the line Yale did not show up so well. Union repeatedly attacked it, and nearly always made a gain. The line men seem slow. Perhaps the absence of Cross and Chadwick in the centre may account for some of that.

Union seems to be in about the same fix as Yale. Her line is weak, and although Yale had a weak one she played havoc with the Union linemen, going through at almost every point, and whenever she chose. Behind the line Union showed up to better advantage, but Peters has a good chance to improve at quarterback. In fact, the whole team may be criticised in the same way, for at times their playing was very ragged. Everybody fumbled, and it seemed that no one could hold the ball. That was the worst feature of the game, and it is unexcusable. The team work, too, at times was ragged, but on a whole it cannot be considered very bad. With the fact in mind that this was Union's first game, and that it was against one of the strongest college teams in the county, there is nothing to complain of, for she certainly played a plucky uphill game. With a little more coaching the prospects for a good team are very bright. We make no mention of individual players, for the reason that all played the best game they could, and all are to be congratulated on the way they showed up.

THE GAME.

Promptly at 3.30 the two teams lined up, and the game was on. Jerrems kicked the ball for thirty yards, but Sweetland caught it and returned the kick. Yale bucked Union's center for small gains, and then worked Union's ends until the ball was within three yards of Union's goal. Thorne was then shoved over the line, scoring the first touchdown in six minutes. Thorne tried for goal, but failed. Score—Yale 4, Union 0.

Sweetland kicked off for Union, Thorne caught and brought the ball back ten yards. Jerrems then fumbled, Lyon got the ball and made fifteen yards for Union. Union's chances looked bright for a touchdown, and the air was filled with yells. The ball was passed to Myers, but he fumbled, and Yale got the ball again. Thorne kicked, Sweetland caught the ball and returned it. Thorne advanced the ball fifteen yards on the catch, and soon went around the end for fifteen more. DeWitt was then pushed through the centre for a touchdown. Jerrems kicked an easy goal. Score—Yale 10, Union 0.

Sweetland kicked off for thirty yards, but Jerrems caught the ball and advanced it fifteen. Yale then lost the ball through a fumble by Jerrems. Sweetland was sent through Yale's centre for ten yards, but immediately after Lyon lost fifteen by fumbling. Myers then went through the centre for five yards, but lost the ball to Longacre on a fumble. Yale kicked, and Sweetland caught the ball. After Lyon had made ten yards and Union had hammered at the Yale center for several more large gains, she again lost the ball on a fumble. Yale kicked, but the Union men misjudged the ball and it went to Yale again. Thorne then went through Union's right end for a touchdown and Jerrems failed to kick a goal. Score—Yale 14, Union 0.

Union kicked off again for thirty yards, but Thorne caught and brought the ball back fifteen. After several rushes the ball was passed to Jerrems for a kick, but he fumbled and Yale lost ten yards. Union got the ball, and Sweetland kicked to DeWitt. Yale then tried Union's centre for three rushes, but failed to gain, and when time was called the ball was in Union's territory. Score—Yale 14, Union 0.

After ten minutes rest the teams lined up for the second half. Captain Thorne had replaced MacFarlane by Sheldon, Bass by Murphy, Hinckey by Lea and he had taken Jerrem's place and put Hammond in at left half-back. Union seemed to play now with a greater determination, and they took a great brace.

Sweetland kicked and Thorne returned it. Union then made some large gains, mostly through the centre, but again lost the ball on a fumble. Yale kicked, Sweetland dropped it, and Yale's ball again. Union, however, soon got it again on an off side play after Thorne had tried to kick, but had been blocked. Sweetland was then sent through the centre for five yards, but Yale got the ball on four downs. Hammond then made twenty yards around Union's end, and Thorne was pushed over the line for a touchdown. Thorne kicked the goal. Score—Yale 20, Union 0.

Union kicked, but it was returned to Myers, who advanced it ten yards. After a few centre plays, in which Union made slight gains, she was given ten yards for off side play by Yale. After several more unsuccessful attempts to gain, Sweetland kicked. DeWitt caught the ball and carried it forward to Union's twenty-five yard line. Thorne tried for a goal from the field, but failed. Sweetland kicked from the ten-yard line, Thorne caught the ball, and after some of the prettiest dodging ever seen on the field, landed it back to Union's fifteen-yard line. DeWitt was then sent through Union's line for a touchdown, and Thorne kicked a goal. Score—Yale 26, Union 0.

Yale returned Union's kick, and Sweetland got the ball. Union then made a few gains through the centre, and finally kicked to DeWitt, who advanced the ball thirty yards. When time was called the ball was in the centre of the field in Yale's hands. Final score—Yale 26, Union 0.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

President Raymond was an enthusiastic spectator. He occupied a seat in the front row of the grand stand.

The Law School boys drove to the grounds in a bus decorated with the garnet. They had a yell of their own, and with the Union yell besides, they managed to make themselves heard very often.

The 1:33 train from Schenectady had thirteen carloads of people, mostly bound to see the game. They had to attach two extra coaches at Schenectady.

Both teams stopped at the Kenmore. The Union team returned home on the 8.10.

The Chi Psi boys drove over from Schenectady in a drag decorated with garnet and with UNION on each side. They were very conspicuous at the game.

The Union alumni of Albany seem very enthusiastic over the team.

Y. M. C. A.

Three years ago the Y. M. C. A. was organized at Union. Until that time there had been a local organization, but it was found that it could not do the efficient work that might be done if the influence of a national union were brought to bear. So under the direction of Mr. Goodman, State secretary, Union organized a regular association and joined the intercollegiate movement.

Emmet Sloat, '94, was the first president, and under him the association was gotten well organized and equipped for work. Correspondence was established with the central New York office, and thus, by plans gained and through the inspiration offered by coming in touch with other colleges, the association grew rapidly.

The second year of work was under the direction of T. F. Bayles, '95. This year was devoted principally to arousing an interest in the work among the Christian students of the college. And it succeeded so well that at the end of the year eighty members were on the roll.

Geo. E. Pollock, '96, is now president. The association begins this year under particularly favorable circumstances. Through the kindness and thoughtfulness of some of the ladies of the city and professors' wives, very beautiful and convenient rooms have been provided in South College. This places the association in a much better condition than ever before. Then, too, there was a large representation at Northfield during the summer; and the influence of that place working through so many men is sure to make itself felt during the coming year.

So the association, at the beginning of this third year finds itself most favorably equipped for an exceedingly prosperous season. And it is the determination of the members to make the most of the opportunity. The regular work will be a vesper service each Sunday, a meeting for prayer each Tuesday evening, a Bible class led by Prof. Truax, and a number of group classes for Bible study. Besides this the individual members are resolved to do such personal work as to make the religious life of Union higher than it ever has been before. Thus the history of the association has been one of steady growth—first of organization, second of strength and third of influence.

The New Dormitory.

Scarcely a day passes that some inquiry is not made concerning the outlook for the new dormitory. That there will be a new "dorm" there has been no doubt, but what kind and when, have been standing questions for a long time. President Raymond's western trip and the announcement upon his return that there would be a new dormitory built by the alumni he had visited, is still fresh in our minds.

Last June, during Centennial week, the trustees of the college decided to employ a landscape architect to prepare a general plan for any new buildings to be erected, so that the harmony of the original scheme, could, as far as possible, be preserved. This, reaching the ears of the western alumni, they immediately sent word east, asking that the plan for their new dormitory be made here under the direction of the landscape architect.

Shortly after college closed, Mr. Olmsted, of the firm that designed the world's fair buildings, came to college hill and made a careful plan of the grounds, asking time in which to prepare the final plan. Messrs. Fuller and Wheeler, the Albany architects, conferred with Mr. Olmsted as to the proper design of the new buildings. This was decided upon and the plan was prepared, it having just been completed. The plan will at once be sent to Chicago, to be acted upon by the committee of the alumni. This will take so long, and it is already so late in the season, that work on the new structure will hardly be begun before next spring.

Before making the plans for the dormitory, a representative of Fuller & Wilson visited Yale and Harvard, and many other colleges, for the purpose of gathering ideas and suggestions. It is said that the new dormitory to be built for Union will be one of the most convenient and best equipped college buildings to be found in this country.

The new building will be a beautiful structure, with a capacity of sixty-four students.

The Fall Athletic Meet.

The annual fall handicap meet of the Track Athletic Association will be held at the Schenectady Driving Park, Friday, Oct. 18. The outlook for a good athletic team is very promising.

Among those of last year's team that have returned to college are: Kilpatrick, '98, the world's champion half-mile runner; Sands, '98, the quarter-mile runner; O'Neill, '97, Allen, '98, Twiford, '96, Pildain, '96, Pollock, '96, Todd, '98, Cotton, '97, Turner, '98, C. J. Vrooman, '98, G. Vroman, '98, Sylvester, '98, Deyoe, '98, Hild, '98, Campbell, '96, Sommer, '96, Myers, '96, Hoxie, '98, McMillan, '98, Yates, '98, Multer, '97, and among the Freshman class there are Cregan, French, Lyon, Cook, Hinman, Smith, all having made their mark on the track.

Some of the special features of the meet will be a championship quarter-mile race between Kilpatrick, '98, and Sands, '98. Sands and O'Neill will run the 220-yard dash for the college championship, and settle the dispute which arose last spring, when O'Neill won the dash and broke the college record. Kilpatrick will run the half-mile from the scratch, giving the other men a handicap of from 40 to 90 yards. Burtiss and Campbell will ride a championship bicycle race to lower the college record, aside from the regular bicycle race, and to close the program there will be an exciting half-mile relay race between the four class.

Union 9, General Electric 6.

So read the scorer's book after a seven-inning game in which both teams played good ball, and played to win. Saturday, the 28th, was just the day for a ball game, and then, too, we wanted to see "just one more" before the campus was abandoned to the gory foot-ball giant. We came, we saw, we conquered. "Cal" and his brethren have trodden too many diamonds to go down before a local team. But you mustn't think those General Electric fellows can't play ball. The game started in good snappy form, with Union at bat. Gray promptly retired three men on strikes, Clarke leading his side for a run in the second half. Zeros represented the second inning. Then for a little while there was no electricity in the laughs, for it was with a garnet hue that a diamond shaped motion was seen as with a tramp, tramp, tramp, Enders & Co. pushed one another around the bases. Nine men went to bat for four runs. Probably it made the fellows tired—Union from running, Edison from counting—for it was not until the last half of the fourth that the home plate was again reached. Then the visitors scored two runs, tying the score with another in the fifth. Union led again in the sixth, and two more in the last inning counted us nine runs. The electricians left us the game by Moran's out at the bat with a man on first and third. The game was called to allow foot-ball practice.

There was only one college yell during the game.

The crowd stayed to see the foot-ball practice.

Charley Sullivan, '97, of base-ball fame, has been adding glory to his name by playing second base on the widely known "Athletics" of Cooperstown.

STUDENTS OF THE ALBANY DEPARTMENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY.

We send a copy of this issue of the CONCORDIENSIS to each member of the Albany Departments in hopes that you will appreciate our efforts to make the paper a University publication, and support it with your subscription and literary contributions. The students of the Law School are requested to give their subscriptions to Mr. E. S. Brown, and those of the Medical and Pharmacy to Mr. Leonard McClintock. Both of these gentlemen will also be pleased to receive any items of interest for publication. No papers of the next issue will be sent to those who do not subscribe.

STUDENTS AND ALUMNI.

With our next issue we shall make up our permanent mailing list, and the names of those receiving the first two issues will be entered as subscribers, unless otherwise ordered. All persons ordering their paper discontinued after the third issue will be expected to pay for the numbers already received. Address all business communications to the Business Manager.

WHERE are our political clubs? They should reorganize at once.

OUR NEW cover seems to have made a great hit. Anyway, it is better than the old one.

WE TOLD you so—that we would be better next time. Four extra pages of reading matter.

OF COURSE everybody has subscribed to THE CONCORDIENSIS. If they haven't, they ought to do so at once.

IT IS through the kindness of J. A. O'Neill, '97, that we are able to give such a full report of the Albany Medical College.

FRESHMEN, don't forget that it is your duty to support THE CONCORDIENSIS just as much as any other college organization.

SATURDAY seems to have been a Yale day. She also won the international contest in track and field athletics with Cambridge at New York, winning eight out of eleven events.

LET US have more noise at our next game in Albany. Enthusiasm does not seem to be lacking but there is a decided lack of yelling. At Saturday's game it seemed that the people in the grand stand yelled more than the college boys themselves.

SATURDAY'S game demonstrated very clearly the fact that we must have a large scrub out daily in order to give the 'varsity team practice. Every man who can should be on the field every afternoon and help to make up a good strong second eleven.

EVERYONE should read the article in this issue on Dr. Whitehorne. It is authentic, for it comes from his own lips, and it is through this courtesy that we are able to publish it. Dr. Whitehorne is dear to every son of Old Union, and, he will ever be remembered as a scholar and teacher, but most of all as a man.

THE "new man" is, for the first few weeks of his course, almost bewildered at the multitude of demands upon him, calling for his attention to fraternities, musical organizations athletics, Y. M. C. A., and the rest of the list. But after all, it is for his development in every possible way that the student attends college. We therefore feel free to draw attention to the work of our two literary and debating societies, the Adelpic and the Philomathean. Every Freshman ought to be enrolled as a member of one of these as early as possible in his college course. Here, the literary man is cared for. From these halls have gone forth men whose voices have been heard from the highest seats of our country. They began as Freshmen, and rose from the position of participants in the open debate to rank among the chiefs of debaters. Every year there is held an inter-collegiate oratorical contest between Rochester, Syracuse and Union, in which Union was the victor last year. Also, there is the annual inter-society debate. Every man has equal opportunity with his fellow-student to prepare for these. We urge greater activity along this line, and advise the in-coming class to enter one of the societies at once.

THE EFFORT that is being made to have systematized reports sent to the different papers through their representatives is surely to be commended. The scheme that is now being tried is a good one, but its success of course rests a great deal with the correspondents themselves. It is as follows: Prof. Mosher, representing the faculty, collects all the news that he is able to find, and the different correspondents go to him for it, at the same time exchanging that they may have. In this way each man is able to get the news of the greatest importance around college and in an easy manner. Prof. Mosher also keeps a book of clippings from the different papers, thus preserving a minute history of the doings around college which may sometime in the future prove very valuable. Every correspondent in college should do all in his power to help this scheme along, for it is surely a valuable one. Heretofore there has been no union among the many correspondents, and valuable news that could have been used has, in a good many cases, been entirely left out. The college should be well represented in every leading journal in the state, and it is only by helping one another that the best results can be obtained. By taking an interest in the scheme you will not only help yourself but you will help your college, and that is what every true son of Old Union ought to strive to do.

FOR a paper or magazine to continually praise itself for its own progress and success, is far from proper. But it is not at all out of place to make plain statements regarding improvements to be made, nor to recount changes for the better that have been brought about. And it is true that under the present management THE CONCORDIENSIS has inaugurated phases of journalism, and has added to the paper in many needed departments. This year the paper appears in a neat new dress, which has received many favorable comments. And with this issue a further addition is made. In the last number of the paper it was stated that some news from the departments at Albany would be published, and thus an attempt would be made to draw the whole university closer together. To this end there has been added to the paper this week four pages of reading matter. This will be devoted to news from Albany. Special correspondents for the Medical and Law departments have been secured, and these men will see that the latest and most important news is reported promptly. This is an addition which the students of all departments are sure to appreciate, for it does not merely give the College department an opportunity to hear the news, but it also gives the other departments a chance to make themselves heard, and provides a means of communicating with one another. It is another step toward that close union between all the university students that will soon result.

THE Musical Association has again started its work. Manager Clowe has begun his rehearsals, and he is very much encouraged over the showing that many of the new men are making. At present the prospects for a splendid set of clubs for the coming season are very bright, and Union should have a musical organization to be proud of.

The musical association is just as much a part of the college as any athletic team, and every man in college should stand shoulder to shoulder in its support. If he can play an instrument or sing, it is his duty to be on hand at every rehearsal and thus lend his support. If he cannot do this, he should enthuse over the work of the clubs. This is one association of the college that the student body is not called on to contribute money to support, for it supports itself, and in return they should be ready to do anything in their power to make it better.

In a great many communities a college is judged mainly by its musical clubs. If a concert which is not up to the standard is given in a town, the people at once infer, and often rightly, that the college from which the clubs come is no good. On the other hand, if the musical organization is a good one, it will be of great advantage in advertising the college, for the people will naturally enthuse over anything that is of a high grade.

The association last year, although new, had great success in the concerts that it gave, and they were all a benefit to the college. Let us this coming year do even better and show the public that we have something at Union besides athletics, and that our musical organizations cannot be beaten by any of the smaller colleges in the country.

Here and There.

THE FACULTY.

A Freshman, we will not give his name, was looking over the new CONCORDIENSIS, and seeing the article on additions to the faculty, said, "Gad, won't that make the catalogue loom up?" Now there's a point, which perhaps has not been taken before; but it is well taken, nevertheless. For, after all, one of the primal objects is to advertise the college and secure good men for each incoming class—in other words—"to make the catalogue loom up." It follows as the night the day, to have good men in the college is first to get them; and what will bring them nearer than the prestige of a good faculty?

And that most learned body should seek no sarcasm in the Freshman's enthusiastic remark. Rather should they learn from it, as wise men learn from children, that their sphere of well-doing has been expanded without increase of labor. As they daily augment the mental dawn in the routine of the class-room, their light goes farther, and, acting as a guide for those seeking a place to learn, draws them surely and steadily to Union. And when, at some time not far hence, others than alumni will concede that the finest college on earth is this same Union, no more will the concession be due the fact that she turns out the best men, than to the knowledge that the fame of her faculty brings the best men here.

MANAGER GREENMAN ON FULL-BACKS.

One afternoon a few days after college opened Manager Greenman, of the foot-ball team, with his usual complacent and quiet air, stood on the field watching the men practice. A stranger came along, and of course began to talk foot-ball, for that is the only topic discussed on the field. At a first glance one might have taken the stranger for a German, a large oily-faced German, for his face was red and plump, and shone like a mirror. To set it off, encircling his chin was one of the most charming Van Dykes I ever saw, while a blue coat buttoned tight and a yachting cap gave him an appearance not unlike a sea captain. But that walk! How can one ever forget it? It was a weary walk, not a weariness that comes from over-work, but a weariness known as "that tired feeling," which many inherit.

He informed Mr. Greenman that he was not a Freshman, but that he thought of entering college and would like to try for the team. He was told that he would be given "all the show in the world," and the conversation finally drifted to last year's team. It was something as follows:

Stranger—"I hear you had a pretty good team last fall." Greenman—"Yes, we had a very good team, and we were weak in only one position. That was at full-back." Stranger—"Indeed; what seemed to be the trouble? I heard myself that he wasn't much good." Greenman—"Well, I'll tell you. The fellow we had last year was Richards, of Sandy Hill. He isn't back this year, for he has been ill with the fever. Richards was a good fellow and worked hard, but he didn't seem to know the game. He surely tried hard enough, but somehow he didn't seem to do very well. His eye sight was poor for one thing, and he couldn't kick a baloon. We had to keep him there, for we had no one better. With the help of the other three men behind the line we managed to get along pretty well, but full-back was our weakest point on the team. I always felt sorry for Richards, for he surely had good intentions and he did the best he could. He was——"

"Hello, Orrie," some one from across the field yelled, and Manager Greenman turned only to see our stranger doubled up in a fit of laughter. "How are you, Greenman?" he said, "I am glad some one has finally sized me up. Will see you later." Greenman blushed, thought whether or not he had better make an apology, and finally decided to go look in the glass and see if he knew himself.

The Psi U. Dance.

The Psi U's gave the first dance of the season at their house on Friday evening. It was a very informal affair. Among the ladies present were Miss Waite of Sandy Hill; Miss Whitehead of New York; Miss Caney of Amsterdam; Miss Carrie Davis, Mrs. Beattie, the Miss Susan Yates, Miss Walker, Miss Dora Yates, Miss Ostrom, Miss Campbell, Miss Barker, Miss Clute, Miss Johnson, Mrs. Price, Miss Price, Mrs. Truax, Miss Truax, and Mrs. Mosher from the city.

THE ALBANY LAW SCHOOL.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE NEW CLASS AND OTHER NOTES.

This department is located at Albany, and became a part of Union University in 1873. During its long and successful career, it has in common with other law schools, done much to demonstrate, what at one time was doubtful, but is now accepted almost as an axiom, that a course at a law school is a well nigh necessary pre-requisite to a successful professional career.

The law department of the University has caught the spirit of the times, and has undergone a thorough re-organization since the last scholastic year. The board of trustees and the faculty are materially changed, and it is expected that under the new regime there will be greater harmony in the department itself, and that a closer relationship will grow up between all the departments of the University. That the different departments are mutually dependent is generally admitted. The college receives dignity and stability from the graduate schools, and in return a liberal number of students from the college every year avail themselves of the advantages offered for graduate work in the capital city, "with its libraries, museums and old time culture."

In order to encourage the spirit of emulation and industry the board of trustees has established a prize system, and offered several valuable prizes, one being worth $125 to the student of the best general excellence. Beginning with the class of '97 in the law school, four $100 scholarships will be offered by the college to the students who have completed a college course at Union and enter the law department at Albany for their professional studies.

Recently the library has been entirely refitted, and many valuable books have been added, making it a very practical working library.

The objects and aims of the law school are the inculcation of the leading principles of law as the law is practiced in the American courts of to-day. It makes no pretensions to give the student the advantages of the broad culture in the law that is offered by the three year's course at Columbia and Harvard. It assumes a fundamental knowledge of the general subject, and aims to fix the practical features of modern practice in the student's mind and incidentally prepare him for the State bar examinations.

This method of instruction is well adapted to the college graduate. As under the rules of the Court of Appeals for the admission of attorneys, three years must be spent in preparation. An exception of one year is made in favor of the college graduate, so that a one year course in the Albany Law School and one year in the office of a practical attorney completes the time required before taking the examination for admission to the bar.

The college has the momentum that necessarily results from a hundred years of active life, accelerated by the inspiration that generally attends the advent of a new and vigorous president. The law department, after nearly half a century of prosperity, has the good fortune to possess a distinguished board of trustees with the public spirited senator, Amasa J. Parker as president, and the learned and practical jurist and legal author, J. Newton Fiero, as dean of the faculty on which are the following special lecturers:

HON. CHARLES ANDREWS,
Chief Judge Court of Appeals.

HON. JUDSON S. LANDON, LL. D.,
Constitutional Law.

HON. WILLIAM L. LEARNED, LL. D.,
Trial of Causes.

HON. ALTON B. PARKER,
Justice Supreme Court.

HON. MATTHEW HALE, LL. D.,
Professional Ethics.

HON. D. CADY HERRICK,
Municipal Corporations.

CHARLES A. COLLIN, A. M.,
The Statutes of New York.

ANDREW MCFARLANE, M. D.,
Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity.

The names of such men in the catalogue give unmistakable evidence of the nature of the work at the Albany Law School. Surely such an auspicious present portends a successful future for the re-organized University.

W. G. BROWN, '95.

Mr. George W. Kirchwey, secretary of the Columbia School of Law, and professor of law on the faculty, called at the school Wednesday. He was formerly dean of the law school. In a few remarks he complimented the Albany Law School upon the class of men it had drawn into its classes during the past, stating that they were generally men who came for the purpose of learning the law and not for pasttime, as in some of the law schools. He said that there was no royal road to success and honor, and wished to impress that lesson if nothing more. Mr. Kirchwey will begin his duties at Columbia on Monday morning.

A committee composed of Hammond, E. S. Brown and Oliver chose a yell for the class that will be shouted from the tops of a drag while the foot-ball team tries titles with Yale tomorrow.

Thursday night several of the boys attended a reception given to the educational institutions of the city by the Emmanuel Baptist Church.

Mr. E. S. Brown, a graduate of Alfred University, has been chosen by the students to be the Law School representative on THE CONCORDIENSIS, which will hereafter devote space to both the Law School and Medical College.

The entering class at the Law School is not a very large one, but all are faithful, hard workers, and men who have pursued legal studies from one to ten years. Besides, a large number are college graduates. The list is not yet complete, for several others have declared their intentions to enter. Following are the names of those that have registered up to Saturday:

ALBANY MEDICAL COLLEGE.

The Albany Medical College opened its doors at the beginning of the sixty-fifth session on Tuesday, Sept. 24, and present indications point to the attendance of a large class and to a prosperous session. At this writing (Oct. 2) 162 students have matriculated, and the entering class numbers 64, and these numbers are slightly in advance of those recorded at this time last year, when the largest class in the history of the college was in attendance. The course this year differs in some respects from that of last season. It is strictly a graded course, some subjects having been divided, so that the work of each year is separate and distinct. Heretofore first and second year, and second and third year students, have attended certain lectures in common, but this course is no longer to be followed. The present method, while it affords an opportunity for the fuller and broader treatment of the subjects of study, requires harder work on the part of the student, and it remains to be seen whether, with a course of the present length, the average student will be able to gain the knowledge, more especially of the first and second year branches, required of him in the time at his disposal. If it should appear, after fair trial, that he is not able to do this, modifications will be made in the curriculum, or the course extended.

Ground has been broken for the Bender Hygienic Laboratory north of the Dudley Observatory on Lake Avenue, an admirable situation for a building, which, through the public spirited generosity of the donor, Matthew W. Bender, of Albany, will render possible, in the near future, instruction in the bacteriology and pathological anatomy according to the latest and most approved methods of study. These subjects are developing so rapidly, and now form so important a part of the medical course, that the new facilities which the college will soon possess for teaching them will constitute a most important addition to its equipment. Other changes and improvements are contemplated, and will be made from time to time, as occasion demands.

The faculty of the college are desirous of seeing the different departments of Union University more intimately united than they are at present. Active co-operation will surely strengthen each of them, and the CONCORDIENSIS will be accomplishing a good work if it aids in upbuilding and strengthening a sentiment which shall prompt the alumni of Union College to greater interest in the post graduate schools, and quicken the interest which those who are connected with these schools feel in the work of the college.

The Y. M. C. A. Movement.

The methamorphosis of the room opposite the entrance called forth remarks of approval from the returning students upon their first visit to the college this fall. Instead of a musty-smelling store-room, they were greeted with a cheerful, well-furnished parlor upon the open door of which were the letters Y. M. C. A., and over the window casement, in the direct line of vision, the word "WELCOME."

Last year the college Y. M. C. A. lived under difficulties, being obliged to hold irregular and infrequent meetings at such times as the class-rooms were available, and never enjoying that social intercourse of the members afforded by the present quarters. This intermingling of men with common purposes and interests, is of inestimable advantage, and tends to develop that manliness so essential to success in the practice of medicine.

A student can make no more fatal mistake than to devote his time too exclusively to science, and neglect his social and moral development, for though he may have infinite professional skill, yet, without a pleasing personality with which to win the confidence and respect of his associates he will never be able to build up a large practice. The college develops the physician, the Y. M. C. A. develops the man.

The present membership is about 30, though at the first meeting that number will undoubtedly be doubled. Weekly meetings are held at 2 P. M. Tuesdays, and a class in Bible study is conducted every Wednesday evening by Shaw, '96. Free writing material is supplied to the students and the current literature of science, art, and fiction, is kept on file. The members of the faculty have contributed $10 each, and contributions of two or three dollars have been received from about a dozen of the students to aid in furnishing and maintaining the room.

The officers are : Shaw, '96, President ; Travell, '97, Vice-President ; Slocum, '97, Secretary and Treasurer.

It also beats the Canadian record of 1 min. 57 1-5 sec., also made by himself last fall. A. W. Gifford, Montreal A. A., gave him a hard race, and he only won by a small margin. In the same games George Sands was a close third in the quarter-mile run, the time of the winner being 50 sec.

Those not passing will be recorded N. S." "All men now having conditions must remove them at the examination on Dec. 7, or lose their class standing, unless otherwise provided."

Unequalled for Delicacy and Flavor.

Made in two strengths.

YALE MIXTURE is now packed in two blends, one of which contains less St. James Parish Perique and more Turkish and Havana, thus reducing the strength without impairing the flavor or aroma. The boxes containing this blend have the word "MILD" printed across the top. The original blend remains unchanged.

A two ounce trial package by mail, postpaid, for 25 cents.

The Hand Book.

The little leather-bound book which has been issued by the Y. M. C. A., and which bears the name "Union" on its cover, is indeed a worthy production. It is in the possession of nearly all the students, so that a description is hardly necessary. But the association has done an incalculable amount of good by the publishing of a book of this nature, and particularly in sending it out, free of charge, to all new students before their arrival at college.

The book is one of the finest issued by any college, and would be a credit to any.

It contains in a concise, yet complete form, all the information concerning the different departments of college life. Besides this there are views of the grounds, and one of the most valuable things of all, a map of the city with all of the principal buildings located. The "Suggestions to New Students" are good; and should the book be followed there would be a class of the most honorable and thorough college men.

The committee having in charge the publication of the book were; W. H. Hall, '96; W. J. Sanderson, '95, and A. M. Blodgett, '97.
