HON. S. K WILLIAMS, LL. D.

A student's or a professional life, although not one of thrilling incidents, is often as potent of influence as one of stirring action. Among those whom Union College has sent out, there are those who have filled a more than usual space in public estimation, and whose influence has been felt to such an extent as to render their lives worthy of record in the annals of the college. The subject of our sketch, Hon. Stephen K. Williams, LL. D., is one of them.

Of Welch ancestry, some of them marked figures in the earliest history of the settlement of the country, he is by birth a Vermonter. He entered Union College one year in advance, being the Sophomore year, in the class of 1837, at the age of 15 years, and graduated at 18.

While in college he stood among the first in a class of about 125, being particularly proficient in the languages and mathematics. He was a member of the Philomathean Society and "F. S." Fraternity. On his graduation he was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and was elected to deliver an oration on commencement day. his subject being "Decision of Character." He has since received from Union College the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Immediately after his graduation he spent part of a year in Adrian, Michigan, buying grain. He then returned to Newark, N. Y., and entered the law office of Hon. Lyman Sherwood, County Judge, as a student, and after remaining there about a year finished his studies in the office of George H. Middleton, an able and accomplished lawyer, and on his admission to the bar was offered and accepted a partnership with Mr. Middleton in the law business, with whom he remained several years. On Mr. Middleton being elected county judge the firm was dissolved, and Mr. Williams opened a law office by himself in Newark, where he has since resided.

Mr. Williams has since been a devoted student and, taking for his motto that "Genius is Labor," has exemplified it by hard labor in his profession, and has risen to the rank as one of the most prominent lawyers in his section of the State Always giving hard work, exhaustive research and careful preparation to his law cases, he is very successful, and is always listened to with marked attention in his arguments in the courts.

He also, during several years, interested himself in political matters. He was district attorney for Wayne County for three years. He declined other political preferment for some time, but at length, yielding to the solicitation of his friends, he was elected State Senator for the 25th district, including the counties of Cayuga and Wayne, in 1864, and performed the duties in that body so acceptably to his constituents that he was twice re-elected, holding the office six successive years. He was a member of important committees in the Senate. He gave the same ardent and industrious effort to the duties of his political positions as to his private practice in his profession. While in political life Mr. Williams was recognized as a factor of influence in his district and throughout the State. He for a long time enjoyed the intimate friendship and confidence of William H. Seward, one of Mr. Williams' constituents (of Cayuga county) especially while Mr. Seward was Secretary of State in President Lincoln's administration. Mr. Williams was a delegate to the national convention at Baltimore, which nominated Mr. Lincoln for his second term as President; and he was in Albany as Senator at the time of President Lincoln's assassination, and took part in the ceremonies attending the reception of his body in that city on its way to the tomb in Springfield, Ill.

Mr. Williams was active in forwarding legislation in support of the Government in raising troops during the war. He was a member of the County War Committee and President of the Town War Committee, and freely devoted his time and energies to the raising of and care for the volunteers during the great struggle.

He was president of the Sodus Point and Southern Railroad Company while that road was in the process of construction and until its completion, and contributed largely to its building. The completion of this road was the commencement of the permanent growth of the village of Newark, and it has ever since been a principal cause of the exceptional advancement and prosperity of that village.

In 1882 Mr. Williams became the editor of the United States Supreme Court Reports, published by the Lawyers' Co-operative Publishing Company of Rochester, and has since, with the exception of one year, acceptably filled this responsible position. In that year he went to Washington and inaugurated the necessary arrangements for the publishing of these reports, and while there formed the acquaintance of Chief Justice Waite and other members of that court. The edition is now in thirty-eight volumes, fully annotated by him, each one containing four of the official volumes.

He has always kept up his law practice at Newark, and is a partner with his son, Byron C. Williams, who has also assisted him in his work as editor of the United States Supreme Court Reports.

Mr. Williams is a trustee of Union College, elected by the Alumni in 1892. Since his election as Trustee he has been actively at work for the good of the college. He is also one of the committee on centennial endowment of the college. He also takes an interest in Sunday-school work, being a member of the executive committee of the New York State Sunday-school Association, and is actively engaged in that work.

Mr. Williams is of marked characteristics, firm in his friendships and energetic in whatever he undertakes.

The Qalifornia Grack Team.

The eleven crack athletes from the University of California, and their manager, came up from New York, where they had been participating in the Mott Haven games, Sunday. Upon reaching Schenectady they established headquarters at the Edison.

On Monday evening a reception was tendered them at the Psi Upsilon house, and many Union men availed themselves of this opportunity for meeting the Western athletes. The presence of the glee and mandolin clubs was one of the features of the reception. The reception committee consisted of Messrs. Barnes, Shalders, Allen, Greenman, Derby and Twiford.

The California men were extended the privileges of the campus, track and gymnasium, the use of which they have enjoyed during their short stay with us of three days.

Union's Rally to Arms in 1861.

BY A '62 MAN.

As I now remember, the raid of John Brown at Harper's Ferry, his capture, trial and execution, did not cause a ripple of excitement among the students at Union. In the Presidential campaign of 1860, resulting in the election of Mr. Lincoln, we had two parading clubs, about equal in numbers, "The Wide Awakes" (Republican) and "The Little Giants" Both clubs were well (Democrats). drilled, and with torches and uniforms we took part in all the parades of our respective parties in the cities around Dorp. The clubs presented a fine appearance, conducted themselves with decorum, and received favorable comment from the press.

Following the election of Mr. Lincoln soon came the convention of the Southern States, with their resolutions of secession and organization into a Confederacy. The newspapers both North and South waged a wordy warfare, which it is unnecessary to repeat. At this time there were at Union about seventy-five students in the different classes from the southern and border states, but as far as I now remember, secession, pro or con, did not occupy the college thought. I cannot recall a single discussion, certainly none of an acrimonious nature, on the subject. We all seemed to regard it as a political controversy which, like our own class or college broils, would soon blow over without a serious conclusion.

On returning for the Spring term, in the middle of April, 1861, all had changed. The southern students had left college. Fort Sumter had been captured. President Lincoln had called for seventy-five thousand men, and it was evident to the dullest man on the hill that war in earnest was upon the country, though the brightest one among us had but a faint conception of the magnitude of events soon to follow. An intense spirit of loyalty and devotion was manifested by every student. Many of the rooms were hung with the stars and stripes. Knots of students gathered, and the whole drift of conversation was for fight. The young men now in the halls of Old Union can never know or feel the force of patriotic inspiration which moved and inspired the boys in 1861. A love of country, a devotion to the flag, a determination that the nation must be preserved, these were the thoughts uppermost on the campus and at the sunset gatherings on the terrace—and many a gallant lad soon went forth to mingle the garnet of the college with the crimson of battle.

Someone remembered that stored away in cobweb places of the college were a lot of old muskets, relics of 1812, whose history I do not know. They were brought out of hiding. Flint lock, long, smooth bore, triangular bayonet, rusty, probably would kick backwards as effectively as they would shoot forwards, but they were fighting guns nevertheless.

So a meeting was called in the South Colonade of those who wanted to drill and learn how to fight. About sixty or seventy of us responded, signed a roll and elected the following officers, viz: Captain, Prof. Elias Peissner; 1st Lieutenant, Chas. N. Odell, '62; 2nd Lieutenant, N. B. Schwerin, '63, and a full line of non-commissioned officers. Thus were the Union College Zouaves born. Red flannel trousers and caps, blue jackets, belts and small haversacks constituted the uniforms of the dandy company.

thoroughly Captain Peissner was A strict disciplinschooled in the drill. arian, quick to reward proficiency or scold the laggard, he made a model commander. His bearing was military, his commands sharp and decisive; undoubtedly he had been fully trained in Germany. National events were crowding fast. In those May and June days Big Bethel had been fought and lost, Ellsworth killed, West Virginia had been restored to the Union cause, and equally fast had Captain Peissner taught us the rudiments of We had become proficient in war. everything pertaining to company drill and the manual of arms. We had mastered the skirmish line, and the officers, three hundred yards in our rear, could handle us with the bugle. Then we took to engineering. Near where the new red building now stands we threw up a line of works. How we sweat and made the dirt fly; but we learned scarp and counterscarp, and parapet, traverse and embrasure, and dragged by hand the brush for the abatis. Crowds came from town every evening to see us drill upon the campus. We were pretty good boys and obedient soldiers, but once in a while we broke over. I well remember one evening a large crowd of citizens were watching us and we did elegant work. Then Captain Peissner put us in the pasture facing the river for skirmish drill. The Captain, with the Bugler, stood on the terrace; te-ta-ta-te-ta-right and left deploy, forward, rally by fours, rally on the centre, rally on the reserve—we did it nicely and on the jump; again came deploy and forward, then the Devil broke loose, and with a yell like wild Arabs, disregarding the bugle sounds, we charged forward, breaking all order of formation and semblance of discipline.

Peissner was over the terrace in an instant in a towering rage, and well he might be. He took the bugle, and with his own lips sounded the recall. We sullenly returned, and would not form line for the officers. How he lashed us.—English and German, commingled. But soon he straightened us out; we made apology and all was serene. Probably not a dozen of those watching knew we had been guilty of a breach of discipline. The Spring term closed; separation came, never to be reunited; and from the play of soldier many soon faced the reality of war.

I have no means of ascertaining how many of our Zouave company enlisted for Of the officers, Captain Peissthe war. ner and Lieutenant Schwerin were killed at Chancellorsville, 1st Sergt. Butler was wounded at Gettysburg. Lieutenant Odell was Captain in the 119th N. Y. Of the other officers I am not Infantry. informed. The class of '62 had on its roll all told 135 names, 42 of whom joined the Union service either in the army or navy. Of these Barclay, Esselstyne, Gebhart, McConnell and Nicholas were killed or mortally wounded in battle. While Corbin, Crounse, Graham and Roshong died of disease incidental to camp and field. And thus did Union rally to arms in '61.

At the last college meeting considerable business of importance was transacted. The following men were nominated: For assistant manager of track athletics, Terry, '96; Clowe, '96; for assistant managers of football team, Canfield, '97; Todd, '97. As the nomination of an alumnus for the advisory board, to serve for one year, was necessary, A. J. Dillingham was chosen. Derby, '96, presented the constitution of the musical association, which was adopted unanimously.

The Catin Play at the University of Syracuse.

On Thursday evening, May 16, the University of Syracuse "brought out" the Trinummus of Plautus. The performance was given in the Bastable Theatre in the presence of a "full house," which numbered among its audience not only many leading citizens of the town itself and members of the University faculty and student body, but also not a few representatives from more or less distant institutions of education and The play was rendered by learning. members of the Senior Class—two of them young women, for Syracuse rejoices in co-education. The parts taken by the young ladies, however, though well done, were not burdensome, as they belonged to the prologue only, or, rather, in themselves made up the prologue. Women seldom appeared on the ancient stage. Their parts were acted by men, and in the Latin comedy consisted of a very few lines, and in some instances of none at In the Trinumus there are no all. feminine parts whatever. The women of the play exist only in the imagination. The old men utter wise saws at the expense of their wives, and the young men fall in love. But neither wives nor maidens are presented to the eyes of the audience. The characters are eight in number. Four elderly gentlemen, two youths, a slave and a sycophant or swindler constitute the cast, and it would be difficult to say which of these was best enacted at Syracuse, so well had the students, each and all of them, been trained both in the acting and in the delivery of A few slips here and there the lines. were to be expected, as when an actor skipped a line and was put right by the prompter, or occasionally lapsed into the English sound of e or i. The metres, too, were adhered to with fair exactness; yet the elision or slurring of final vowels and of final m was a rule more honored in the breach than the observance. Perhaps this matter of elision was carried to the other extreme in the Harvard play—a fault not wholly on the right side, at least to the mind of a spectator who is endeavoring to follow the Latin with the ear.

Great pains had been taken to insure correctness in the dress, in the color and length of the hair, and in the shape of the Each actor was robed in the chiton, which was longer or shorter according to the age and standing of the character he represented, and over the chiton, or slung carelessly across the left arm, was the conventional himation, or pallium, from which this species of drama derives its name. Most noticeable were the embroidered chiton and crimson pallium of Mr. C. S. Gager, who played the part of Lysiteles, the youth of noble character and unblemished life, while the "get up" of Mr. Nichols, who acted the Sycophant, was Oriental in the extreme.

The stage scenery correctly represented a street in Athens and exhibited the fronts of the houses of Charmides and Philto; and although the curtain fell at the close of each act, the scene, of course, did not change.

The music had been composed expressly for the Trinummus by Prof. Fay of the University, and was rendered on a flute and clarinet, the instruments being concealed from view and their tones softened by a covering or curtain under which the musicians sat. Meantime the tibicen or pipe-player, who did his part in dumb show, was stationed at the rear of the stage according to ancient precedent. As there are no less than four lyrical monologues in the Trinummus, as well as a fair distribution of septenarii and octonarii, the music was an important feature of the occasion, and the composer is to be congratulated on his success in adapting it both to the circumstances of the drama and to the verse. The metres of Plautus are both less simple than those of Terence, and less perfectly understood—facts that rendered the composition of a scroll for the Trinummus a more serious undertaking than the making of one for the Phormio of Terence. On the other hand, the careful study of this subject by the Harvard professors must render this question easier of solution for all time to come.

If the performance at Syracuse lacked some of the life and "go" which lent charm to the Harvard play, it must be remembered that the Trinummus presents few striking opportunities to the actor, when compared with the Phormio. There is less action, less plot, and a smaller number of characters that excite great interest. In deed, the writer, in common with others, was not a little surprised at the selection of the Trinummus in preference to another play. But the Trinummus offers a presentable plot, and of the Latin plays so distinguished there are few that have not already been exhibited somewhere The Trinummus was in this country. acted for the first time in America at the Syracuse University. The play is to be commended to the perusal of the young; for though less enlivening than the Captivi, the Menaechmi or the Phormio, its moral tone is unexceptionable. The moral is forecast in the prologue, wherein "Luxury" informs us that profligacy is Accordingly "Luxury" disruinous.

patches her daughter "Poverty" to take her place in the house of Lesbonicus, the profligate. While these abstractions are confined to the prologue, the idea that they voice finds its subsequent realization in the dialogue and plot.

On the whole there is little to be said in the way of criticism, and much to be uttered by way of praise in regard to this most creditable performance. Nor is it to be forgotten that its success was owing mainly to the efforts of Prof. Frank Smalley, whose good taste, exact scholarship and indefatigable energy were united in the achievement of results that must always reflect credit upon himself and honor upon the Syracuse University.

Subscriptions terminate with the collegiate year in June. Subscribers will greatly oblige the management by remitting at once.

Some of the faculty and Schenectady ladies are at work upon a centennial souvenir newspaper which will be published just previous to commencement The paper will be replete with interesting data concerning the college, and will be fully illustrated with views of the buildings and grounds, many of which have never been published before. In a word, the paper will be a valuable souvenir of the centennial. A copy should be in the possession of every Union man.

AT LAST the annual catalogue of the university is out. It is a 208 page volume, bound in the usual manner, with the same contents as previous issues, with the exception of the notice of some important changes in the curriculum and general regulations. From the college roster we learn that there are 49 Seniors, 51 Juniors, 49 Sophomores, 99 Freshmen and 15 Eclectics, making a total of 263 students in the college. In the medical school there are 199 students, in the law school 36, and in the school of pharmacy 47, making a total of 545 students in the university.

THE team of general athletes from the University of California, which our own sturdy men will have the pleasure of meeting on the Ridgefield oval to-morrow, has a brilliant record of victories which it will not be in our province to dim, strive as we may. However, we will thoroughly enjoy meeting California, and we hope to contest the several events in a manner that will make the meet interesting to the spectators, as well to our opponents.

Apropos of the subject, we are positive of two things: we could have beaten Williams, we cannot beat California. And the question arises as to whether it would be more profitable to us to defeat the former, or be ourselves defeated by the latter. Certainly it would have been a great pleasure to us to have worsted Williams, especially so since they always have an excuse for not meeting us unless the winning points are ten to one in their favor. But when the practical advantages of association with such a team as we will meet to-morrow are considered, all doubts as to our preference are dispelled, and we are compelled to admit that an easy victory is not to be compared with a graceful defeat.

Preliminaries to select men to compete at Albany, Decoration Day, in the 220 yds., 120 yds., hurdle, 1 mile and ½ mile run were held on the college track Monday, May 20.

Kilpatrick will run Fikes a quarter in Syracuse on June 8.

The Senior-Junior ball game resulted in favor of the latter by a score of 14 to 12.

The 1-C. A. A. meeting.

The twentieth annual field meeting of the Inter-Collegiate Athletic Association was held at Berkeley Oval, New York City, last Friday and Saturday. Yale won with 30 points, University of Pennsylvania got second with 25 points and Harvard was third with 22 points.

Union was represented by Charles Kilpatrick, '98, L. F. O'Neill, '97, B. A. Burtiss, '97, and Capt. M. A. Twiford, '96, but all except Kilpatrick were shut out in the trial heats on Friday. patrick met his first defeat in the halfmile on Saturday and it was all owing to misjudgment. He intended to enter the mile run and Murphy, his old trainer, told him to take his time and save himself for that, for he could win the half all right. As a result the pace for the first quarter was very slow, it being run in 63 seconds, and when it came to the final spurt near the tape, Hollister, the Harvard man, outsprinted him, winning by six inches in 2 minutes flat.

Later he entered the mile run and he ran a grand race. Orton, the University of Pennsylvania flyer, had been saved on purpose to beat Kilpatrick, but he had to run the race of his life to do it. Kilpatrick finished only a few yards behind him and beat Jarvis, the ex-champion, by about ten yards. Orton's time was $4.23\frac{2}{5}$ and Kilpatrick's $4.25\frac{4}{5}$, each beating the former inter-collegiate record of $4.26\frac{4}{5}$. These times also beat the collegiate record for that distance, and Orton also broke his own record of 4.25.

She frowned on him and called him Mr.,
Because in fun he only Kr.,

Union, 20; lansingburgh, 2.

On Saturday last Union played a one-sided game on the campus with the Lansingburgh team. For the first five innings the game was close, but after that Union knocked LaBelle out of the box. Union's only error was Quinlan's muffed third strike.

The score by innings was as follows:

Batteries—For Union, Sturdevant and Quinlan; for Lansingburgh, LaBelle and Gorman, Crystal and Marghan. Umpire—Daly, '97.

songs of Old Union.

The long promised song book has at length made its appearance. The book is very neatly gotten up and reflects great credit upon the editors. It is something that has been needed by the students for a long time; a book containing all of the Union songs with their music. College songs have been neglected too long by the students; it is astonishing how few are able to sing all three verses of the "Song to Old Union."

For over a year the editors have been at work, and their labors have been rewarded by a most creditable production. All that now remains to make the book a success is the patronage of the students, and this, it seems, they should be willing to give.

"The Conflict Between the Russian and the Turk" was the subject of Dr. Wells' last lecture.

J. V. Wemple, '93, a recent graduate of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, was in town recently.

Manager Greenman has completed arrangements for a football game with Yale at Ridgefield on October 12.

Prof. Hoffman attended the funeral ceremonies of ex-President Seelye of Amherst at Amherst, Thursday, May 16.

On May 20 Dr. Wells lectured to the members of the Pipe and Stein on "Student Life in the German Universities."

The Alumni of New England will meet at Young's Hotel, Boston, to-night, to perfect their organization. Dr. Raymond will speak.

Prof. Ashmore and Mr. Edwards attended the performance of the Trinummus of Plautus by students of Syracuse University at Syracuse May 17.

President Streeter, of the Senior class, has appointed the following men as the committee on Grove exercises for commencement: Bayles, Johnston and Harby.

The following have been appointed sophomore aids for the commencement ball: Canfield, Draper, Frey, Fuller, McMullen, Todd, Williams, Wingate, Willis and Wyckoff.

Here and There.

NO, NOT TIT FOR TAT.

Since Williams withdrew from her agreement to meet our track and field team in the annual dual games much discussion has arisen as to what should be Union's course with respect to baseball. The matter appeals to me very much in this manner: We knew that we would beat Williams in track athletics; so did they. They know that they will beat us in baseball; so do we. Undoubtedly their action in track athletics was prompted by their foreknowledge of what the issue of a meeting would be; and it will be exactly that same foreknowledge that will prompt Union's action in baseball, but it will be a different action. Union will go down to Ridgefield on June 1st resolved to put up as good game of ball as she knows how. The day will go to Williams, and she will return to the Berkshires that night with the satisfaction of having "done a big thing," and Union will return to the Mohawk with the satisfaction of having "done the square."

So I say, and I voice the unanimous sentiment of the student body, "no, not tit for tat."

The Freshmen celebrated their recent athletic victories in a marvelous manner a week ago Friday night. Judging from the enthusiastic, nay wild, expressions of delight that burst in rapturous peals from the melodious esophagi of the jubilants, and broke with ever-increasing reverberations against the adamantine ears of the few spectators, they were very happy. Someone has said somewhere that to be good is to be happy. Would that the rule worked the other way.

"Judge" Brown and "Count Spaghetti" or, speaking collectively, the Heavenly Twins, were there. The "Judge" is always eloquent, and, conditions being favorable, he is more so. Conditions were favorable; hence, he was more so. The "Count" is never a bad fellow, even though he is encumbered with an empty title—but that is only speaking of the title. Cheer up, Spaghetti!

Here are two lines which I dedicate to the "Count":

The chink of the glass and the guzzle of beer Are very bad sounds for young Freshmen to hear. And to the "Judge":

Aye, pardon the rhyme, I could even say more; They are known to have ruined the bold Sophomore.

> Eyes were made to droop, Cheeks were made to blush, Hair was made to crimp and curl, Lips were made—oh, hush!—Ex.
